

Year 3:
Changing Me

Key Learning

A baby grows in the mother's womb and gets all the nutrients it needs from its mother.

Some animals lay eggs and some animals carry the egg inside them.

People can be judged on the colour of their skin, their gender, their appearance and many others. This is called a stereotype.

Gender stereotypes are when someone is judged for being a boy or a girl. For example, 'pink is for girls and blue is for boys.'

It is important that we challenge stereotypes so that this may not be as
